

The Art of Growing Food

Simplify Your Kitchen Garden Design

If you have been considering renovating your kitchen garden, or eager to start growing a food garden, that is both beautiful and productive, this class is for you. Join Ellen Ecker Ogden in her virtual class The Art of Growing Food to learn her six steps to successful kitchen garden design.

In this class you will learn how to organize, and simplify your efforts. Starting with an overview of how a kitchen garden can be more than simply a place to grow food, you will then start with a design on paper, learn about garden beds and paths, and select the right plants for the best flavor and productivity.

The Schedule: Six Saturdays: 10:30 AM – Noon

January 22	Overview: The Art of Growing Food.
January 29	Design: Start with a Plan on Paper.
February 5	Elements of Style: Paths, Beds & Benches.
February 12	Seeds: Selection, Starting and Saving.
February 19	Soil, Compost and Planting.
February 26	From Paper to Garden.

This is a live Zoom class, taught on a virtual platform for optimal sharing of ideas with other students. Templates are provided from her books (The Complete Kitchen Garden and The New Heirloom Garden) to help you formulate a working plan that fits your own landscape.

Each class is set up based on a step-by-step method to simplify and add beauty. Ellen will offer a free 45-minute introductory workshop for you to learn her core principles of kitchen garden design. If you'd like to dig in deeper with more instruction and inspiration, sign up for the full class, which begins mid- January and will run for 6 weeks.

Free Introductory Classes:

- Saturday, December 11 @11 AM
- Wednesday, January 12 @5 PM
